ABSTRACT

Nearly 200 bibliographic resources on Asian and Pacific Americans (APA) groups that discuss historical, social science, and creative literature topics are included. The titles listed are either annotated bibliographies or literature reviews which are arranged by APA groups except for an initial general APA section and concluding sections on special topics and general resources on racial and ethnic groups. The APA groups included are Chinese, Indochinese, Koreans, Pacific Islanders, and Filipinos. This compilation of bibliographic resources is intended to be comprehensive rather than selective. The document concludes with footnotes that provide information about obtaining resources and Asian American collections. (RSL)

Existing Bibliographic Resources on Asian and Pacific Americans

This document identifies existing bibliographic resources on Asian and Pacific American (APA) groups.[1] It is especially intended for students, teachers, researchers, and others who might be relatively unfamiliar with the historical, social science, and creative literature related to APA groups.

The titles listed below are either bibliographies or literature reviews.[2] Many of the former are annotated. Some bibliographies appear at the ends of books or monographs; these have been included only if they were specially compiled and go beyond the usual documentation of references in a text. The reviews are useful as they provide critical frameworks within which to examine certain types of literature.[3]

The titles listed below are arranged by APA group except for an initial general APA section and concluding sections on special topics and selected general resources on racial and ethnic groups. Some titles may not be widely available except through the use of interlibrary loan procedures. Those which are part of the Educational Resources Information Center (ERIC) document system are so indicated. Copies of the latter may be ordered through the ERIC Document Reproduction Service.[4] Also, several hundred libraries and other organizations have collections of ERIC documents on microfiche.[5]

This compilation of bibliographic resources is intended to be comprehensive rather than selective. However, there are obviously differences in the quality and scope of these resources. In general, the most recent titles are better as they incorporate more of the literature related to APA groups. The APA literature dealing with certain topics such education or the elderly is best covered by titles in the section on special topics. The extensive annual bibliographies published in Amerasia Journal will be particularly useful for individuals such as researchers with fairly specific interests; these are listed in the initial general APA section under the names of John Liu and Gary Okihiro.[6]

Literature related to APA groups is widely available. Historical and social science books on APAs and the published creative writing of APA authors can be found in many major libraries. Research articles on APAs can be found in libraries with sizeable holdings of scholarly journals in the fields of psychology, sociology, social work, education, history, and ethnic studies. Finally, a number of libraries have Asian American collections which contain both secondary and primary materials on APA groups.[7]

FOOTNOTES

1. This document is a revised and expanded version of two earlier papers:

   a) Endo, Russell. "Bibliographic Resources on Pacific/Asian Americans," P/AAMHRC Research Review 1 (July 1982): 3-6. ERIC Document #ED-206-541.

   b) Endo, Russell. "Bibliographic Materials on Asian and Pacific Americans," Ethnic Forum 3 (Fall 1983): 94-107.

2. Materials on East Indians have not been included. Also not included are the following documents which only list bibliographic resources on Asian and Pacific Americans:

   a) Yee, Carolyn. "Sources on Asian Americans." Pp. 585-587 in Emma Gee (ed.), Counterpoint: Perspectives on Asian America. Los Angeles, CA: Asian American Studies Center, University of California, 1976. ERIC Document #ED-147-378.
